Learning Difficulties and Autism Spectrum Disorders

“Once you’ve met one person with Autism you have met one person with Autism”

Autism and Asperger Syndrome are on the Autistic Spectrum, this is a developmental condition affecting the way the brain processes information and how a person communicates and relates to others.

People with Autistic Spectrum Disorders generally have difficulties in three main areas within their lives, Social Communication, Social Imagination and Social Relationships. This is referred to as the ‘triad of impairments’.

To what extent each person is affected is unique and our trained and dedicated staff work on a one to one basis to identify specific needs and tailor an action plan to meet individual requirements.

Dementia and Personal Care in Your Own Home

The word dementia describes a set of symptoms that may include memory loss, difficulties with thinking, problem-solving or language. The signs are often small to start with but for someone with dementia they can be severe enough to affect daily life and result in mood or behaviour changes.

Dementia tends to affect people differently, especially in the early stages. How others respond, and how supportive or enabling the person’s surroundings are also greatly affect how well someone can live with dementia.

CNCA staff have the skill, patience and expertise to identify the best course of action required so our clients can live as full and active a life as possible, whilst preserving independence and dignity at all times.
